1 PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that at 10:00 a.m. on July 16, 1999, in the 2 Courtroom of the Honorable Charles R. Breyer, located at 450 Golden Gate Avenue, 3 San Francisco, California, 94102, defendants and counterclaimants-in-intervention, 4 EDWARD NEIL BRUNDRIDGE, IMA CARTER, REBECCA NIKKEL and 5 LUCIA Y. VIER (the "Members"), will and do hereby move this Court for an order 6 pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(b), expressly determining that there is 7 no just reason for delay and expressly directing the entry of judgment on the 8 Members' counterclaims pursuant to the memorandum and order entered on 9 February 25, 1999 (the "February Order"), and awarding such further relief as the 10 Court may find appropriate.¹ The Members further request that the Court make its 11 order retroactive to apply to the Members' April 26, 1999 notices of appeal.

12

13 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

14 I. PRELIMINARY STATEMENT.

15 The Members intervened in this action on September 3, 1998 to defend against 16 plaintiff United States of America's (the "Government's") attempts to close the 17 defendant cannabis cooperatives and to assert a counterclaim against the Government.
18 The counterclaim alleges that the Members have a fundamental right to be free from 19 governmental interdiction of their personal, self-funded medical decisions, in 20 consultation with personal physicians, to take the only effective legal medication 21 available to relieve their pain and suffering. The Court dismissed these constitutional 22 claims without leave to amend on the ground that they failed to state a claim upon 23 which relief can be granted. The Government's claims technically remain pending, 24 but there is no activity in the district court and no trial or pretrial schedule dates set.

25 The Members wish to pursue these constitutional claims on appeal and seek the 26 Court's permission to do so by requesting Rule 54(b) certification of the order

27 _____

28 1 This motion is based upon the attached memorandum of points and authorities, and all of the records and files in these actions.

1 dismissing their claims. The Members suffer chronic and debilitating pain as a result 2 of serious illnesses. By their Counterclaim, the Members sought to relieve this pain.
3 Thus, the Members would like to pursue the legal viability of their claims now.

4 The order dismissing the counterclaim plainly satisfies the threshold 5 requirements of Rule 54(b) because these actions each involve multiple parties and 6 claims, and the order dismissing the counterclaim was final. The Members' request 7 also satisfies the factors a district court considers when exercising its discretion to 8 certify an order pursuant to Rule 54(b): There are sound practical reasons for 9 certifying the dismissal order, including that it will relieve the Members from being 10 forced to wait until final disposition of the Government's claims to seek an appellate 11 ruling on the viability of their constitutional claims, it will result in efficient judicial 12 administration of these matters, and it will confine the issues for trial.

13 In these circumstances, there is no just reason for delay, and the Court should 14 in its sound discretion issue an order certifying its February 25, 1999 order as final.
15 The Members should not be prevented from pursuing their constitutional claims until 16 final disposition of these matters, particularly where at this time there is little activity 17 in the trial court and significant issues are on appeal.

18 II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND.

19 A. The Government's multiple claims against multiple defendants.

20 In January 1998, the Government filed six separate lawsuits against six 21 cooperative associations and individuals ("defendant cooperatives"), seeking, among 22 other things, a preliminary and permanent injunction under the Controlled Substances 23 Act (see 21 U.S.C. § 882) (the "Act") to prevent the defendant cooperatives from 24 distributing cannabis. See Complaints, filed January 8, 1998 (the "Complaints") 25 (Prayer). In January 1998, the Court issued an order relating the six lawsuits. Each 26 complaint named more than one defendant. For example, the complaint against the 27 Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative also named Jeffrey Jones as a defendant. In 28 addition, each complaint asserted three counts: (1) defendants violated the Act by

1 engaging in the manufacture and distribution of marijuana with the intent to 2 manufacture and distribute marijuana, (2) defendants violated the Act by maintaining a 3 location for the purpose of manufacturing and distributing marijuana and 4 (3) defendants conspired to violate the Act. See Complaints, ¶¶ 23-31.

5 B. The defendant cooperatives' appeals.

6 The defendant cooperatives are in the process of appealing several rulings. The 7 rulings relate to the preliminary injunction that the Court issued in May 1998 8 enjoining the defendant cooperatives from engaging in the manufacture, distribution or 9 possession of marijuana in violation of section 841(a)(1) of the Act. See U.S. v.
10 Cannabis Cultivators Club, 5 F. Supp. 2d 1086, 1106 (N.D. Cal. 1998).

11 The preliminary injunction was followed by contempt proceedings in July 1998
12 when the Government moved for an order to show cause why the defendant 13 cooperatives should not be held in contempt for failing to comply with the preliminary 14 injunction and for summary judgment. The Oakland defendants moved to modify the 15 preliminary injunction and to dismiss the Government's complaint on the ground that 16 it failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

17 In September 1998, the Court issued an order to show cause as to the Oakland 18 and Marin defendants. See Orders to Show Cause, filed September 3, 1998. The 19 Court denied the Government's request for an order to show cause as to the Ukiah 20 defendants and, at the request of the Government, later vacated its order to show cause 21 as to the Marin defendants. See Order in Case No. 98-00086, filed December 23, 22 1998. The Court denied the Oakland defendants' motions to modify the injunction 23 and to dismiss the complaint. See Orders, filed September 3, 1998. After further 24 proceedings, the Court held the Oakland defendants in contempt and modified its 25 injunction to permit enforcement against the Oakland cooperative.²

26 _____
27 2 See Memoranda and Orders re: Motions in Limine, Etc. in Case Nos. 98-00086 28 and 98-00088, both filed October 13, 1998. See also Order Modifying Injunction in Case No. 98-00088, filed October 13, 1998.

1 The Oakland defendants have appealed the orders denying their motion to 2 dismiss, denying their motion to modify the preliminary injunction and granting the 3 Government's motion to modify the preliminary injunction, and their appeals remain 4 pending. See Notices of Appeal, filed October 8, 16 and 27, 1998. They argued their 5 appeals on April 13, 1999.

6 C. The Members' claims.

7 At the Members' request, the Court granted the Members permission to 8 intervene pursuant to Rule 24 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. See Order re: 9 Motion to Intervene, filed on or about September 3, 1998. On October 2, 1998, the 10 Members filed answers to the Government's complaints (in case numbers C 98-0085, 11 C 98-0086 and C 98-0087) and their Counterclaim-in-Intervention for Declaratory and 12 Injunctive Relief ("Counterclaim" or "Cntyclm.").

13 As set forth in the Counterclaim, each of the Members is in danger of 14 imminent harm due to serious illness, and each uses cannabis for medical purposes.
15 See Cntyclm. ¶ 10. In each case, such use has been deemed appropriate and 16 recommended by the Member's physician. Id. Each of the Members is a member of 17 one of the defendant cooperatives. See id. ¶¶ 4-7. The Members have tried 18 traditional, conventional medicines, none of which proved effective, and each has 19 found cannabis to be the only effective treatment for his or her condition. Id.

20 Since the cooperatives are prevented from distributing cannabis, the Members 21 cannot obtain cannabis that is safe and affordable pursuant to state law. Cntyclm.
22 ¶ 16. The Members are suffering a special harm as result of the relief the 23 Government seeks. Id. ¶¶ 21-22. By virtue of the governmental intrusion, the 24 Members are unable not only to speak freely with their doctors about their conditions 25 and medical needs, but to act on their doctors' advice as to the only medication that 26 effectively alleviates their pain or stimulates their appetite: cannabis. Id. ¶¶ 18(c), 19.
27 Their privacy and doctor relationships thus have been harmed and will continue to be 28

2 injunction in these actions.

3 For these reasons, the Members brought the Counterclaim. By it, the Members 4 seek declaratory and injunctive relief to exercise their fundamental right under the 5 Fifth Amendment to be free from governmental interdiction of their personal, self-6 funded medical decisions to take the only effective legal medication available to 7 relieve their own pain and suffering, to obtain their personal physicians' 8 recommendations for appropriate medical care for serious illnesses and injuries, and to 9 take advantage of available medications for such conditions as recommended by their 10 personal physicians. Cntrclm. at 9-10.

11 D. The Government's motion to dismiss the Counterclaim.

12 In December 1998, the Government moved to dismiss the Counterclaim for 13 failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. See Plaintiff's Motion to 14 Dismiss Counterclaim-in-Intervention for Declaratory and Injunctive Relief, filed 15 December 4, 1998. After a hearing in February, the Court dismissed the Counterclaim 16 without leave to amend. See Memorandum and Order, filed February 25, 1999. The 17 Members filed notices of appeal April 26, 1999 pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1).

18 III. ARGUMENT.

19 A. The Court should direct entry of final judgment on the 20 February Order.

21 The Court should direct entry of judgment on its February Order dismissing the 22 Members' Counterclaim because there is no just reason to delay entry of this order.
23 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(b) allows a district court dealing with multiple 24 claims or multiple parties to direct the entry of final judgment as to fewer than all of 25 the claims or parties. Curtiss-Wright Corp. v. General Elec. Co., 446 U.S. 1, 3 (1980).
26 To do so, "the court must make an express determination that there is no just reason 27 for delay." Id. In making a determination under Rule 54(b), a court must first 28 determine that it is dealing with a "final judgment." Id. at 7. "Once having found

1 finality, the district court must go on to determine whether there is any just reason for 2 delay.” Id. at 8. The February Order satisfies all the requirements of Rule 54(b): the 3 actions each involve multiple parties and claims, the February Order is a “final 4 judgment,” and there is no just reason for delay.

5 1. Each of the actions involves more than one claim for relief and 6 multiple parties.

7 The Federal Rules specifically contemplate entry of partial judgment with 8 respect to an order adjudicating a counterclaim. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b) (identifying 9 “counterclaim”). See also Cold Metal Process Co. v. United Eng’g & Foundry Co., 10 351 U.S. 445, 452 (1956) (holding that Rule 54(b) treats counterclaims, whether 11 compulsory or permissive, like other multiple claims and affirming Rule 54(b) 12 certification with unadjudicated counterclaim still pending). Each of these actions 13 involves multiple parties (the Government, at least two defendants and the Members) 14 and multiple claims (the three counts in the Government’s complaints and the 15 Counterclaim). Moreover, intervention will automatically convert a case to a 16 “multiparty” action for purposes of Rule 54(b). See Johnson v. Levy Org. Dev. Co., 17 Inc., 789 F.2d 601, 606 (7th Cir. 1986) (finding that permission to intervene to 18 interplead funds “converted this case into a multiparty action”). Accordingly, these 19 actions involve multiple claims and parties and satisfy the threshold requirement of 20 Rule 54(b).

21 2. The February Order is a “final judgment” for purposes of Rule 22 54(b) certification.

23 The Court’s dismissal of the Counterclaim on the ground that it failed to state a 24 claim upon which relief can be granted is a “final” judgment for purposes of Rule 25 54(b). Under the Supreme Court’s analysis in Curtiss-Wright, a court making a 26 determination under Rule 54(b) must determine if it is dealing with a “final judgment.” 27 446 U.S. at 7. The Court explained: “It must be a ‘judgment’ in the sense that it is a 28 decision upon a cognizable claim for relief, and it must be ‘final’ in the sense that it is

1 'an ultimate disposition of an individual claim entered in the course of a multiple 2 claims action.'" Id. (citations omitted). "Rule 54 requires a certifiable judgment 3 finally to resolve at least one claim in a multiple claim action or finally to adjudicate 4 the position of at least one party to a multiple-party action." Continental Airlines, 5 Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 819 F.2d 1519, 1524 (9th Cir. 1987).

6 The February Order finally resolved the Members' claims adversely to the 7 Members. The Court's decision pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) to dismiss the Counterclaim 8 in its entirety without leave to amend is a final adjudication of their claims. A 9 dismissal for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) bars further litigation on the 10 particular claim pleaded. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b) (dismissal, except for lack of 11 jurisdiction, is adjudication on the merits). See also, Cannon v. Loyola Univ. of 12 Chicago, 784 F.2d 777, 780 (7th Cir. 1986) (Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal bars further 13 litigation on claim). In addition, where the claims of an intervenor have been 14 adjudicated, Rule 54(b) certification is particularly appropriate. If the court finally 15 adjudicates all of an intervenor's claims, judgment may be entered under Rule 54(b), 16 despite the pendency of the main claims for later adjudication. See 10 Moore's 17 Federal Practice, § 54.29[5] (Matthew Bender 3d ed. 1999).

18 3. There is no just reason for delay.

19 The equities of these actions and the requirements of efficient judicial 20 administration demonstrate there is no just reason for delay in certifying the 21 February Order as a final judgment. In deciding there is no just reason for delay, 22 courts should be pragmatic, and they should focus on severability and efficient judicial 23 administration. Continental Airlines, 819 F.2d at 1524.

24 One paramount factor that the Court should take into account is the equities 25 involved. Curtiss-Wright, 446 U.S. at 8; Continental Airlines, 819 F.2d at 1524.
26 Fundamentally, it is not fair to prevent the Members, who suffer from serious and 27 chronic pain, from pursuing their constitutional claim to establish their right to be free 28 from governmental intrusion in obtaining the only medication, as recommended by

1 their personal physicians, which relieves their pain. Rule 54(b) certification would 2 permit the Members to appeal their constitutional claims now rather than requiring 3 them to wait until final disposition of the Government's statutory claims (which at this 4 time are not even set for trial).

5 Another factor is the relationship of the adjudicated claims to the unadjudicated 6 claims. Cold Metal Process, 351 U.S. at 452. In Cold Metal Process, the Supreme 7 Court held that a district court may certify a final order on claims which arise out of 8 the same transaction and occurrence as an unadjudicated, pending counterclaim. Id. at 9 908-09. Likewise, in Texaco, Inc. v. Ponsoldt, 939 F.2d 794, 797 (9th Cir. 1991), the 10 Court held that Rule 54(b) claims do not have to be separate from and independent 11 from the remaining claims. The Counterclaim raises separate legal issues from the 12 Government's Complaints, although the parties' claims may arise out of related 13 transactions and occurrences. Nevertheless, the Counterclaim asserts that the Members 14 have a fundamental right to use cannabis. This claim is legally distinct and separate 15 from the Government's claims that the defendant cooperatives allegedly violated the 16 Controlled Substances Act.

17 There is no sound reason to force the Members to wait to resolve on appeal the 18 viability of their claims, particularly since other appeals are already pending and 19 otherwise there is little activity being conducted in the case in the district court.
20 These actions do not have a trial date--they do not even have a status conference date 21 presently scheduled--and for health and fairness reasons the Members should not be 22 made to wait to pursue their claims until final disposition of the entire case. While 23 matters in the trial court are practically stayed, the Members need to pursue the legal 24 viability of their claims so that if the Court of Appeals revives them, they may be 25 tried with the unadjudicated claims pending in these actions. Without Rule 54(b) 26 certification, the Members are prevented from litigating their constitutional claims and 27 seeking relief pursuant to the Counterclaim.

28

1 It will also benefit the judicial administration of these actions if the Members 2 are permitted now to appeal the dismissal of the Counterclaim. In Curtiss-Wright, the 3 district court properly certified a partial summary judgment after considering, among 4 other things, that “the nature of the claims already determined was such that no 5 appellate court would have to decide the same issues more than once even if there 6 were subsequent appeals.” Curtiss-Wright, 446 U.S. at 8. No other party to these 7 actions will appeal the same issues as those raised by the Counterclaim because the 8 other parties are not asserting similar claims and are not seeking similar relief.

9 Moreover, Rule 54(b) certification is proper if it will aid “expeditious decision” 10 of the case by confining or streamlining issues for trial. In Texaco, the Court of 11 Appeals for the Ninth Circuit affirmed the district court’s Rule 54(b) certification 12 because “the legal issues now appealed will streamline the ensuing litigation.” 13 Texaco, 939 F.2d at 798. Rule 54(b) certification is proper where it efficiently 14 separates the legal from the factual questions. Id. By dismissing the Members’ claims 15 pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), the Court separated the legal from the factual issues raised 16 by the Counterclaim. It is on such an order that Rule 54(b) certification is proper.

17 For each of these reasons, there is no just reason that the Members should not 18 be permitted at this time to pursue their constitutional claims on appeal.

19 B. The Court should retroactively certify the February Order.

20 The Members respectfully request that the Court direct entry of judgment of 21 the February Order and make the order retroactive to apply to the Members’ April 26, 22 1999 notices of appeal. A Rule 54(b) certification is sufficient to validate a 23 prematurely filed notice of appeal if neither party is prejudiced. Aguirre v. S.S. Sohio 24 Intrepid, 801 F.2d 1185, 1189 (9th Cir. 1986) (district court directed entry of judgment 25 retroactive to notice of appeal filed four months earlier). The Members filed their 26 notices of appeal pursuant to section 1292(a)(1) of Title 28 of the United States Code.
27 Recently, the Court of Appeals issued an order consolidating the appeals and 28

1 requesting that the Members voluntarily dismiss the appeals or show cause why they 2 should not be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

3 In response, the Members will argue that jurisdiction exists under section 4 1292(a)(1), but the Members would like to offer the Court of Appeals an alternative 5 basis for exercising jurisdiction and accordingly hereby seek retroactive application of 6 the Court's Rule 54(b) certification, should the Court decide to grant the Members' 7 request for certification. Because the issues raised by the Members' April 26, 1999 8 notices of appeal are identical to those raised by the February Order, the Government 9 will not be prejudiced if the Court makes its order retroactive.

10 IV. CONCLUSION.

11 For the foregoing reasons, the Court should enter an order expressly 12 determining that there is no just reason for delay and expressly and retroactively direct 13 entry of judgment as to its February 25, 1999 order dismissing the Counterclaim.
